

SWO Directory of Women Composers of Organ and Liturgical Music Work catalogue

Introduction

General comments

Unlike the SWO directory, which is arranged by country, the work catalogue lists the works of all those women composers alphabetically, but giving their home country, so that cross-referencing is facilitated. This catalogue also mentions composers' second countries of residence, where applicable. The document entails a clickable content table so that you can directly access composers of your interest.

At the time of writing, most of the listed works are available for purchase and/or rent or for free download. In most cases we have included online references, so that scores can easily be found. We have also included short bibliographies and discographies which we intend to gradually supplement with the help of our readers and users. Any omissions are not intended, and gaps will be filled as soon as we learn about further resources.

The listed works are published by a variety of publishers from different countries. Therefore, the referencing style and content of the entries may vary; however, we have aimed for some level of consistency, so that all entries are clearly structured and should be traceable via the relevant sources.

How to use the work catalogue

In general, works are listed in chronological order, starting with the first and ending with the most recent publications. This will allow identifying works with reference to their biographical and historical context.

Where no dates of publications are available, we have listed works according to their instrumentation, following the order: organ solo – organ with instrument – organ with choir – choir a-cappella – organ and orchestra/vocal works with orchestra. Over time we will see whether this approach is useful and revise the listing, if found otherwise.

In some cases, we have listed a composer's entire work list, in others, for reasons of practicality, we have supplied the information via references to websites, other catalogues or publishers. Again, we may revise our approach in line with the experience of those using the catalogue.

As in the case of our directory, the catalogue is work in progress and an open resource. We are looking forward to receiving SWO members' and general readers' comments. If you wish to contribute, please contact our General Secretary, Barbara Kennedy at societyofwomenorganists@gmail.com
